Abstract

The Right of Inquiry as a Method of Parliamentary Control Over the Government's Actions "A Comparative Study Jordan And Egypt"

Yazan Salem Al-E'besat

Mu'tah University, 2006

This study deals with a significant topic which is Inquiry as a method of parliamentary control over the government's actions in Jordan and Egypt. The inquiry is considered to be the most significant method that the parliament practices its control duty over the government's actions for its role in investigation and gathering information within the controlling of legislative councils as well as the parliament role in following the government activity to draw the government attention towards some encroachments and violations that happened in the past, and working on eliminating them the world were careful upon including it, encompass it with several guarantees to be used completely, hence, the Jordanian legislator regulated inquiry encompassed it with several provisions and rules. For the importance of the topic I aimed in this study to identify the core of Inquiry and its correct provisions to produce, then distinguishing the inquiry tasks, the factors that affect its use until approaching the pursuit of inquiry right, its presentation procedures, investigate its answer of response, and comment about it, the cases when the inquiry may come to an end, all these in the light of practical practices in the parliament.

The study tales in the research course the right of inquiry as it considered a method of parliamentary control over the Government's actions in Jordan a comparative approach with the Egyptian legislation.

The study ends with the most important conclusions approached by the researcher, followed by a group of recommendations we saw they assist in the guarantee of inquiry efficiency because it is one of the most important methods for parliamentary control.
